MANY WITNESS CLEVER FEAT

Cut Away Part of Stack and Burn
Wood Which Caused Huge
Chimney To Fall

A 220 foot stack at the Indiana Portland Cement Company plant here was thrown over Monday morning at 10:45 o'clock. The engineering feat was witnessed by several hundred people and the remarkable thing about it was that the immense stack weighing thousands of tons, went down exactly where it was supposed to go.

The work was done by the Rust Engineering Company of Pittsburgh. The stack was one of the first built by the Indiana Portland Cement Company several years ago. It will be replaced by a new one and the only way to get it out of the way, was to tear it down. It was built of reinforced concrete and so could not be torn down, other than to push it over.

The company doing the work, cut away a portion of the stack at the bottom. This weight was taken by heavy timbers, which at the end, were burned away. On the opposite side of the stack, workmen burned the reinforcement away with torches, and the stack went down, just the same as a woodmen would cut down a tree.

It was estimated the stack required five seconds in falling. It was 16 feet in diameter at the base and about six or eight at the top. It stood 220 feet high and had been constructed of solid cement with steel wires from one inch to a half inch in diameter, running up and down it, very close together.

Primaries in the state of Indiana, will be held on Tuesday, May 8. The polls in the voting precincts in Putnam county will be open from 6 o'clock in the morning to 6 o'clock in the evening.

A large vote is expected because of the unusual interest aroused in the election and particularly over the presidential candidates.

In the county elections quite a number of county residents have filed for offices for each party and election enthusiasm is manifest all over the city. Every person, that can possibly do so is urged to vote.

Registration is not necessary and a resident of a precinct, if a resident for at least thirty days is eligible to vote. However, to vote in the Indiana primaries, a voter must have been a resident of the state for at least six months.

INFORMATION FOR VOTERS

The repeal of the Registration and Absent Voters law by the last legislature, has caused so much confusion in the minds of the voters that an explanation of the rules and laws that will be applied in this Primary election has been requested.

All registration as a qualification for voting has been abolished in Indiana with the repeal of the registration law and no registration of any kind is necessary to qualify any person to vote in this primary.

The Absent Voters' law has also been repealed so that no person may vote in this Primary Election or in the General Election next fall, unless they appear at the polls in person to cast their ballot.

Any person who has not yet attained the age of 21 years at the time of the Primary Election but will have attained that age by the time of the General Election, the 6th day of next November, is entitled to vote in the Primary election.

Any person who is a bona fide resident of any precinct on the day of the Primary election is entitled to vote in such election as such residence on the day of the Primary Election will qualify him with the necessary six months in the state, sixty days in the county or township and thirty days in the precinct which are necessary to qualify him to vote in the General Election in November.

SERVICES FOR MOTHERS HELD
IN GYMNASIUMDPAUW MOTHER'S DAY SERVIC-ES WERE WELL ATTENDED
ON SUNDAY.

GYMNASIUM WAS CROWDED

University Orchestra and Choir Were
On Program. Miss Virginia
Auyer Sang Selection.

Mother's Day services for mothers of students in DePauw university, were well attended at the annual services which were held in the Bowman Memorial gymnasium, starting Sunday morning at 10:10 o'clock.

The services opened with several numbers by the University Symphony orchestra, followed by the professional. The University Choir and a vocal selection sung by Miss Virginia Auyer, followed.

Dr. C. Howard Taylor's sermon, "Name With Golden Meaning," in part, follows:

I doubt if there be another word in the English language so sure to awaken tender memories, precious thoughts, and noble aspirations as this little word of six letters—"Mother."

William J. Hart has written of it:—
"O name with golden meanings set,
How dost thou smite on memory's
slumbering strings,
And beat with heavy blow the heart
that sings!

O, stay thy stroke! My eyes with tears are wet."
"O name with golden meanings set,
How dost thou beat on memory's
broken chords,
And wake a love that like no more affords!

O, speed thy stroke! My eyes with tears are wet."

The very mention of this name carries one back to childhood, where his world was small and mother was the center of it. Or, it recalls the face of one—

"Who ran to help him when he fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the place to make it well."

It always brings trooping after it a throng of tender memories, reaching all the way from childhood's early hour to the present or to that tragic moment when a broken home circle left an orphaned child,

"Sighing for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still."

Nor have we yet mentioned all of the mystic ministries of that little word "mother." Where in our language can you find another word so sure to awaken in its aspirations of the nobler sort? It was no mere effort to be pleasing that prompted that soldier boy recently returned from France to say in answer to the question concerning a deed of heroism for which he had received the "Croix de Guerre," "I thought of you, mother, and did my best." It is not possible to estimate how much of the well-purposing and well-going of mankind is inspired by thoughts of mother, but, suffice it to say that aspirations awakened by that name are for the most part in noble directions.

"O mother, when I think of thee,
My heart yearns toward nobility."
For very many of us the name "mother" is a synonym for courage. We have known a little woman, naturally so timid that a mouse entering about the floor struck terror to her heart, yet face to face with major perils which threatened the welfare or the life of her child, she was as unflinching as a warrior tried. It was this fact which prompted Josquin Miller to write that deservedly popular poem "The Mothers of Men."

William L. Stidger, in his "Giant Hours with Poet Preachers," tells of his visit to the Miller home in California after the death of the poet. As he was wandering about the premises, he was met by Mrs. Miller and invited into the room where Mr. Miller used to write his poems. After dainty refreshments had been served, the genial hostess consented to read some of her husband's choicest productions. Among the poems selected was this:

"The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not;
'Twas fought by the mothers of men."

"Not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen;
Not with eloquent word or thought
From the wonderful minds of
men;"

"But deep in a walled-up woman's heart;
A woman that would not yield;
But bravely and patiently bore her part."

Lo! There is the battle field."
"Hot ve with banners and battle shot,
With soldiers to shout and praise,
I tell you the kindest battles fought
Are fought in these silent ways."

Says Dr. Stidger, "after hearing her read that great tribute to noble womanhood, I realized that I had never caught its deeper meanings before."

To all of us who have known the faithful ministries of a mother's care, the name will ever be synonymous with devotion. Devotion is not peculiar to motherhood; it is found elsewhere. We have witnessed the devotion of a man to his business, of a citizen to his country, of a student to his quest for knowledge, of a lover to his sweetheart and a sweetheart to her lover, but for devotion to a mother's devotion to her child. Kipling sings of it in that very familiar little poem, "Mother O' Mine."

"If I were hanged on the highest hill,
I know whose feet would follow me
still,
Mother O' Mine.

"If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
I know whose love would come down
to me,
Mother O' Mine.

"If I were dam'd of body and soul,
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother O' Mine."

It is just possible that more than one of you students are in college because of a mother's devotion. Charles Foster Kent in a baccalaureate address some years ago told of an incident which he had observed at a commencement of the University of Vermont shortly before. When the special prizes were being awarded to the winners, a young man was called forth to receive an especially coveted prize for superior attainment in a certain line. Receiving the prize, he walked down from the platform and pinned it upon the breast of a plainly dressed little woman, who had been watching through tears of joy, the honoring of her boy—the widowed mother, who had toiled ungrudgingly that her boy might have a chance to win an education.

NOT SERIOUS CONDITION

Dog Was Shot And Head Sent To
Indianapolis To Be Examined
Monday Morning.

Mrs. Ross Ferney, living south of Fern, sustained severe lacerations on both her arms, when she was bitten by a pet dog in the yard of her home late Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Ferney went into the yard and noticed her dog chasing a chicken around and when she went over to the dog, to beat him away, he turned on her and made about seven painful gashes on her arms before help could arrive.

Dr. A. E. Ayler was called and a number of the stitches were required to close the wounds. The lacerations were especially severe on her left arm and shoulder.

The dog was killed by Mr. Ferney and the head brought here Saturday where it was placed on ice. Monday morning Mr. Ferney took the head and went to Indianapolis where the head will be examined to see whether or not the animal had been suffering from hydrophobia.

It was not thought that the dog had the rabies as he was perfectly normal in every way until he turned on Mrs. Ferney. However, the head was sent to Indianapolis to determine if possible, what the cause was.

RESIGNATION OF BRATIANU IS DEMANDED

PEASANTS OF ROUMANIA STAGE
HUGE DEMONSTRATION
AT ALBA JULIA.

ALBA JULIA, ROUMANIA, May 7 (UP)—The demand of the peasant party that the government of Premier Bratianu resign immediately probably will be presented in Bucharest today by Julia Maniu, leader of the Peasant party.

The demand was made in a resolution adopted yesterday at one of the greatest meetings the peasants ever held.

Two hundred thousand peasants gathered here Sunday and while there was nothing but the most peaceful activity, on every side could be heard the demand for registration of the Bratianu government.

There was no mention of Prince Carol, a great favorite of the peasants, and there was no demonstration for him.

LONDON, May 7. (UP)—Prince Carol of Roumania, visiting here, planned Sunday to fly to Roumania to take personal charge of the movement to restore him to the throne. It was said officially today that two airplanes were chartered by Carol and were awaiting him at Croydon airport. The government prevented their departure because the party did not possess papers to enable them to land legally in Roumania.

'CARMEN' WILL BE PRESENTED HERE MAY 17-18

STUDENTS OF DEPAUW MUSIC
SCHOOL WILL ATTEMPT
GRAND OPERA.

AT GRANADA THEATER

The Entire University Choir And Symphony Orchestra Will Participate In Production.

Students of the DePauw School of Music will attempt grand opera for the first time when they offer "Carmen" at the Granada theatre on May 17 and 18. The entire University choir and symphony orchestra will participate in the production.

Miss Helen Keith, of Bicknell, and Donald Wilson, of Washington Court House, Ohio, will take the leads in the cast; Miss Keith as Carmen and Mr. Wilson as Don Jose. This will be an all-student production with over a hundred members in the cast. This cast is made up of the leading singers in the School of Music with a chorus of fifty brilliantly costumed girls. The ballet chorus is made up of the best dancers at DePauw and will include Blythe Archibald, Ruth Jensen, Madeline Finley, Fern Bowers, Catherine Hall, and Mary Chamberlain.

The opera will be full of many colorful scenes, beautiful dances, and thrilling dramatic episodes. For the last twenty years this opera has been one of the most popular plays on account of its possessing so much life and entertainment.

The story is based on a love affair between Carmen and two young men, Escamillo, one of the men and also the greatest torreador in Spain, is very indifferent to the wishes of Carmen but she is very persistent and he at last accepts her and allows her to accompany him. Don Jose, the other suitor, becomes angry because of the preference which Carmen has shown to Escamillo. He finally grows so jealous that he follows Carmen to the bull fight, becomes infuriated, and kills her at the entrance to the ring just as the people are applauding the valor of Escamillo. Orville Borchers, head of the department of voice is directing the opera.

Vote for Henry O'Hair for Sheriff who made his own record as Marshal of Greencastle.

SERVICES FOR MOTHERS HELD IN GYMNASIUM

The name "mother" has long been accepted as a synonym for "comforter." Where in all the world is there any one who can comfort as does a mother. Back in those distant days when the literature of the Old Testament was written, one who was attempting to exalt the comforting ministry of God wrote, "Even as a mother comforteth, so I will comfort you." He could find no word in human language which would more magnify the gracious ministry of comfort than this word "mother." And we have no word today with which to describe comfort at its highest and best superior to this precious name.

Everywhere the name "mother" is a synonym for "discerner of unrealized values." The mother sees values in her child which to other eyes are altogether hidden. In Cay's Fables, the author rather jokingly propounds this question—

"Where yet was ever found a mother, Who'd give her booby for another?"

Thomas A. Edison, wizard in the realm of electrical discovery and invention, tells of a time when he was getting on so poorly in school that his teacher thought it not worth while for him to remain in school longer. But his mother, who had great confidence in the latent ability of her son, insisted that he be given a further chance to show what was in him, and he was tolerated a little longer. Some of the rest of us may have been helped along the way when nothing but a mother's confidence in our ability has saved us from miserable failure. In the Louvre in Paris there is a great painting of St. Augustine and his mother Monica. It was painted by a famous artist and tells a wonderful story. The picture represents Augustine as a young man, perhaps twenty-five years of age, looking forward and upward with a gaze of strange intelligence and aspiration, while his mother sits by his side, looking in the same direction with a countenance so pure, so beautiful, so spiritual that it might well be taken for the face of an angel. It is the story of a wayward youth won to the paths of virtue by the prayers, the precepts, the counsels, the holy life of a mother who will always be reckoned among the foremost of the saints of God. What a service she rendered to her son, to the Church, to her own generation, and all succeeding generations when she led her son into the light. She stands by the side of the mother of Christ, the mother of the Wesleys, and other noble mothers known to the world chiefly through the services they have rendered to humanity through their illustrious sons.

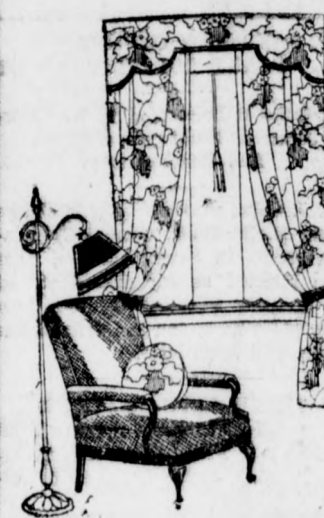

There either has been or soon will be erected in Oklahoma a colossal statue of "The Pioneer Mother," to be visible far and wide of the prairie, as Barnhold's statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World" is seen across the waters of New York Harbor. From the competitive designs offered, the one which won first place, is of a tall, youthful, feminine figure, accompanied by a half-grown boy whose hand is tightly grasped by the hand of the mother. The eager hope and expectation of the mother's face are reflected in the face of her son, whose heart as well as hand seems to hold. Upon her right arm is carried a little bundle of her meager pioneer equipment and in her hand the Book. There she stands, her full share of the hard work in doors and out, but was superlatively the maker of the home, the builder of the character of her sons and daughters, the incubator and exemplar of the vital teachings of the Book, the discoverer of the unrealized abilities in her children.

I can imagine I hear many of you mothers saying within yourselves, "Preacher, you have painted a beautiful picture of motherhood, but it is not my picture. I am not the original. I am full of human faults and failings which would make me out of any such picture of perfection." Probably this is all very true. The best of us bear the blemishes of our human origin. Perhaps it is the mission of the true artist to bring out our features of beauty and to modify if not to conceal our faults. At least no photographer would long be popular who did not freely exercise his skill in so retouching the negatives as to subdue the blemishes and to bring out all the beauty we have. The picture we have been drawing of "mother" may magnify her virtues and obscure her feminine weaknesses, but it is the picture of "mother" that thousands of grateful sons and daughters treasure in their mind, seen through the mellowing mist of memory. It is the picture your children will want to keep of you, when they have journeyed far from childhood days, and perspective has added glory to your maternal virtues. It is the picture of the sort of mother every true woman longs to be.

Such are the golden meanings in this precious name that our thought loves to dwell upon it. No Sunday of the year, with the possible exception of Easter, is so designated as Mother's Day. It is a day of tender memories and revival of noblest aspirations. Under the inspiration of such an occasion even so unknown a poet as Harry Lee can write such lines as these:

"The wistful stars that one by one,
Jet heaven's hills with light,
Are like the little lamps of love
That mothers set at night
On window sills,
That those they love
May guide their steps aright.
So like a little lamp that shone
For me, in days of yore—
So like a little lamp that shines,
On earth, for me
No more!
And when at evenfall, the stars
Dark hills of heaven jet,
They are not stars to me, but lamps
That waiting mothers set
On window sills
Of heaven—
That we may not forget."

OBSERVE VOCATION DAY

Vocation Day was observed in The Presbyterian Church at all services on Sunday in common with thousands of other Churches of many denominations. Speaking especially to the young people, Rev. V. L. Raphael used as the theme of the morning worship "Individual Capacity," suggested by Matthew 25:15: "Unto one he gave five talents, to another two, to another one; to each according to his several ability." In the parable of the talents Jesus voices a piece of ancient knowledge that God has given to man certain endowments. There are to be used, not neglected, with the result that they bring returns equal at least to the investment. The amounts turned over to the servants by the lord of the house were not necessarily a ratio of five, two, one, but they do symbolize the various abilities of man. There is need for all sorts of power as displayed by humanity in order to meet the countless demands of the world. Experience bears this out, as a survey will reveal that it takes exceptional skill for some phases and only mediocre for other purposes of life.

The principle of individual capacity has its place in the field of religion as well as in business, education and social life. There is a task in the work of the Kingdom commensurate with one's qualification to do it. Part-time service provides definite duties for a very large number of members of Churches through administrative, teaching and social activities. It is not necessary, however, to have some special position in order to serve the Master. This is the season of the year when many thousands of young people are completing courses of study in our institutions of collegiate rank. Many have already decided upon their life work and will perhaps go on to further prepare themselves along professional lines or will immediately plunge into their occupation. Quite a group are undecided as to the future, not having chosen a definite goal towards which they will press. To both of these classes, the question might rightly be asked, "Have you given careful thought to your course in life?" Still another may be put to them, "Have you sought the help of Christ, the Adviser, in making your choice?"

The cause of Christ has room in it for men and women of exceptional ability even as business has. There is equal opportunity, at least, and in some cases greater privilege attached to whole-time service for Christ. Why should not this be true taking into consideration our Leader and the gigantic issues at stake in His cause? Among those who have especially fine equipment are these graduates just mentioned. Some of them are needed in the Churches of this country to be their pioneers in new ventures. But others are called by God into service for him upon the world. It requires a right kind of mind, a heart concern for the brotherhood of man and a willingness to serve. The ministry needs the missionary service, evangelists, medical doctors, nurses. It will call for all sorts of privations, separations, hardships. The rewards will be largely for the next world, but the satisfaction of ministering in the service of Christ will cause the reward to send forth a fragrance which will be worth all that is expected.

AT THE VONCASTLE

King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade", and accounted one of the ace directors of filmdom, wielded the megaphone on the new Marion Davies production, "The Patsy", which comes to the Voncastle Theater, on Monday.

Miss Davies is seen in the title role of the screen version of the famous stage play in which Claybourne
Foster starred in New York and Kay Hammond in Los Angeles. The play is one which Miss Davies has wanted to screen for a long time and in it she does some of the best work of her career. The Davies-Vidor combination is also regarded as an especially auspicious one.

Marion Davies is one of the big stellar drawing cards of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer galaxy of stars, and Vidor, in addition to "The Big Parade," is the director of such big film productions as "Bardelys," the Magnificent" and "La Boheme". He has just recently completed a twelve-reel special production, "The Crowd", in which Eleanor Boardman and Jas.
Murray have the leading roles.

AT THE GRANADA

thrilling story of the adventures of a young mining engineer in the fastnesses of South America, produced for Fox Films under the direction of John Griffith Wray, comes to the Granada Theatre for a two day run, beginning today.

Dolores Del Rio, the beautiful Span-sonality as Charmaine in "What Price Glory," has the stellar role.

Others in the cast are Leslie Fenton,

PRESIDENT OBJECTS

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The Mc-Nary-Haugen farm relief bill embodying the equalization fee machinery objected to by President Coolidge, was passed last night by the House.
The vote was 204 to 121.

The measure now must go back to the Senate for adjustment of differences with that body, which several weeks ago approved the bill by a vote of 53 to 23.

As soon as three differences, none of which is of major proportions, are smoothed over the measure will be ready for inspection by President Coolidge. Some have predicted that he will veto it as he did the original McNary-Haugen bill last session.

The House action came after opponents of the fee had exhausted every parliamentary maneuver to remove it from the bill. In the face of a series of reverses the opposing camp kept up its fight and made two unsuccessful last minute moves to that end.

One was a motion by Representative Aswell of Louisiana, ranking Democrat on the House agriculture committee which drafted the measure to substitute his own bill, similar to the McNary-Haugen measure except for the equalization fee. This was rejected on a roll call vote, 163 to 146.

Passage of the bill with the fee machinery intact was expected even by its opponents, although only yesterday they succeeded in carrying a motion by a vote of 141 to 120 expressing disapproval of the fee.

Farm bloc leaders, however, quickly gathered their forces and held the floor with a commanding majority that repulsed every attack upon the bill. Then after consideration of the measure had been completed under the procedure permitting amendment, the farm camp reversed the defeat of yesterday and passed the bill in the form it had desired from the outset.

Supporters of the bill contend that the measure as passed by the House meets all objections raised by President Coolidge in his veto message on the old measure, with the lone exception of the equalization fee, in addition, they argued on behalf of Presidential approval of the measure that the farm board created under the bill would first be directed to endeavor to stabilize the agriculture industry and control crop surpluses by means of loan-to-co-operative organizations.
The equalization fee would be employed only in event failure of the loan provisions to accomplish relief.

For this purpose the bill would authorize an appropriation of $400,000-000, to be known as the revolving fund. Further it contended that the loan-to-co-operatives plan was in line with the views of Secretary Jardine and that if it proved effective the fee would never be used, in view of these charges, supporters of the bill expressed hope that the measure would meet with presidential approval despite the warning of administration leaders to the contrary.

SYNOPSIS

Danny Malone is lured from his dear while bandits again raid the Dayton silk warehouses and is discharged from the force in disgrace.
A note from his long missing brother,
Dick, had tricked him and, fearing that Dick is one of the bandits,
Danny refuses to offer a defense.
His sweetheart, Mary Gillen, however, will not believe Danny is guilty of neglect of duty and suspects Alfred Dayton, Jr., her employer, of being implicated in the silk raids. A newspaper reporter, Jimmy Wells, agrees to help her and suggests that she accompany Dayton to a night club in the hope of obtaining information. Danny in the meantime had taken a job with a trucking firm suspected of being connected with the silk gang and is delivering liquor to an uptown speakeasy when Mary staggers out of the door. She does not see him.

It was a trifle out of date perhaps, but when Mary was inside it no one wasted time on thinking about the dress. She was utterly confident that Dayton would be only too pleased to accompany her and as she laid out her clothes she thought over her plan of campaign.

Dad wondered a little, but the sight of her going around as if she were almost happy swayed his better judgment and he let her make her plans.

Next morning she went into the office intending to be very nice to Dayton. On his desk was a letter from his brokers and on opening it she found that it was a further demand for five thousand dollars.

She was careful to place this letter upon the top of his pile and watched him carefully when he came in and commenced to open them. Unlike the last time, he seemed to be a little worried.

"How much have I in the bank?"
he asked her.

"A little over two thousand dollars," was the reply.

"Mm—not enough, something's got to be done there."

A few minutes later he went out without telling her and was gone for about twenty minutes. On his return he was sadly put out and for the first time since her employment, he snapped at her when she asked him for dictation.

The surprised look in her eyes reminded him that he did not want to offend her. He wished to repay her for the time when she left him flattened after he had driven her home.

"Sorry Miss Gillen," he said solemnly, "I am afraid I forgot myself a little. Won't you have lunch with me to show me that you've forgotten?"

"Not lunch Mr. Dayton, I've got another—" then he interrupted her to make the proposal that she was angling for.

"How about dinner then? A nice little ride uptown in the car, dinner at the Red Mill, or dinner down here, a show and then the Mill after."

"That would be much nicer. I would love to see 'Fanny Face' they say it's awfully good."

"Anywhere you say dear," it was dear already, "you'd better go home early so that we'll have plenty of time. I know how long it takes for girls to struggle into their glad-rags and I want you to be ready when I call for you."

"It's awfully nice of you," Mary encouraged him, "I guess I'll leave around four thirty, if you don't mind."

"Great," he replied, "what'll it be? Show first?"

"I think so. Too much cabaret gets tiresome," she answered brightly, never having been to one,
but wishing to appear as sophisticated as possible.

All day she was very careful to notice each of the calls that Dayton made and received. Nothing happened, and though he had been rehearsing enough while he was making the date, he remained in the nasty temper for the balance of the day.

BELIEVED DANGER PASSED

TABLE ROCK COVE, S. C., May 7 (UP)—Hopeful that pressure on the earth dam had been relieved somewhat by opening a drainage canal, hundreds of workers labored today to prevent the dam giving way and losing millions of gallons of water down Saluda River Valley.

H. W. Perry, superintendent of the Greenville, S. C., water works, expressed the belief that opening of the canal and of a water main would remove much of the pressure and permit the water to drain gradually.

Prof. A. F. Caldwell, who has been in the Methodist hospital for several weeks undergoing treatment has returned to his home in this city.

This Six-Room Bungalow Adapts Self to Any Lot

THERE is much to be said in favor of the one-story dwelling, and when the floor plan is as expertly arranged as in this Colonial bungalow the usual objections of lack of privacy and long distances to walk are avoided. This house may run either lengthwise or across the width of the lot. The exterior is of stained grey shingles with either a green shingled or tiled roof. The trimmings should be white and the shutters green to harmonize with the roof.

The three bedrooms are well shut off from the rest of the house. The large open porch or sunroom can be made to open off either the living or dining room. The kitchen has the desired built-in features, including the useful breakfast nook.

The cost of this house can be materially reduced by omitting the basement and allowing space on the main floor for a small boiler room. The walls and roof also are sheathed with cellog to keep the temperature at comfort point the year round.
